PRIVATE OUTLANDS

Private Outlands is an itinerant photographic project by Italian photographer Lisa Mazzei that reworks the visual imaginary of outland spaces.

'Private' and 'outlands' evoke two opposing dimensions: a personal, intimate space and a vast, distant land.

The word outland carries echoes of a narrative tied to remote environments, shaped by uncertainty and hostility. These images, instead, reclaim a new frontier forged by women, a space where they affirm their natural bodies, free from social constructs.

These bodies inhabit those territories differently, suspended between the epic and the intimate, in a new, peaceful and natural state.

The film border of each image carves out a fragment of reality, creating a space in which women can reclaim and affirm their natural bodies.

These photos are part of a body of work taken in Italy and USA in 2025.
